4. Paul Ely (Play Zones) Introduction

Paul Ely displayed a large poster and displayed the latest caged areas in parks on housing estates to use for physical activities.

There has been a funding interest from the football foundation with a view to have a portfolio of sites for investment of 7-8 sites. These sites are aimed to be used by particular groups such as, the disabled community, households of lower incomes, girls and women and ethnic minorities.

There will be an opportunity to meet with the investors and discuss how these facilities can be catered for the disabled community.

Some of these park spaces are:

- Bruce Castle Park
- Hartington Park
- Wood Grene Common
- Down Hills
- Belmont Grove
- Ferry Lane Estate

Chestnuts Park was excluded, due to the funding conditions, in particular, to have parks that have bookable facilities, which Chestnuts park did not want to have bookable facilities option and only with the option for open access.

Chestnuts Park were made aware that if they were unable to offer the service as per the Councils requirements, that they would not be included as one of the sites.

Sites will be reserved in order to prioritise for those that are unable to book a space themselves. Those from the priority groups, should not be faced with a booking fee.

Access audits into the parks and within the parks, is not the main focus at this time, but is to be considered as the Play Zones project progresses. DAH are able to facilitate the access audits going forward.

The booking system and incident reporting is still to be put in place.

5. Get Out Get Active

Following the programme, the research has created supportive resources, individuals, organisations and what the Council can do and what the leisure service and workforce will look like.

A suggestion to replicate SEND Power's project 'Preparing for Adulthood Strategy', provides work experience and supported work opportunities in different working fields. Included are also internships for placements in a work site and learning alongside, with support getting into work, such as Access to Work.

A similar strategy is being used within New River Project.

Action: Daniel will share the resources information.

Action: Daniel and Qasim to discuss with further connections and discuss in the upcoming DAHPAN sessions.
